The deaf obstructionist is not half so bad as the absent-minded you can sometimes contrive to make the former hear, but the latter is impervious to anything less foreible than the roar of a big cannon. He is sure, too, to meander as he sausters along, so that you cannot guess which side of the road he intends to pursue. Another highly objectionable person is the peripatetic student who reads the news of the day with eager eyes when crossing busy thoroughfares. Several times have I very nearly collided with these nuisances, owing to the impossibility of knowing what line they would follow. The police are powerless, I suppose, to suppress the reprehensible practice.

months' imprisonment to seven weeks, with hard labour, and a salutary warning was given by the judge that in future he would inflict penalties of much greater severity in cases of this kind. Sorry as men, and, in a certain sense, for the men themselves as having been misled by professional agitators, we cannot but recognise the necessity of inflicting exemplary punishment upon those who so far forget the rights of others in their solicitude for their own as to indulge in threats or violence against men who choose to work when they themselves do not. To protect free labour from the tyranny of trade unionism, when trade unionism goes outside its true functions, is a first duty of the State. Any neglect to perform that duty, and any success which riot and intimidation may obtain, is so much ground lost to the cause of labour by the alienation of popular sympathy from the working man and his cause. That is a truth which some working men do not, we are sorry to say, appear to have realised as fully as they ought to have realised as fully as they ought to have done in this country. We would direct the attention of our readers to Australia, a land which, above all others, exists for the benefit of the working man. The recent address of Sir Henry Noz. MAN to the Legislature of Queensland proves how resolute our Australian fellow-subjects are to suppress violence and intimidation in labour disputes with a strong hand, and even with military force. The Australian colonies teach us a valuable lesson by their firm resolution not to allow law and order to be overridden at the pleasure of any trade union. easure of any trade union.

WORKING CLASS THRIFT.

Mr. BALFOUR'S address last Monday to he depositors in the South-Eastern and fetropolitan Railway Savings Bank con-ained some exceedingly practical observa-ions on the subject of thrift. One may ions on the subject of thrift. One may well marvel why it is that other great imployers of labour have not imitated these we railway companies, which have in-tituted a savings bank for their employés which, pays the handsome rate of per cent. interest on deposits. two railway companies, which have instituted a savings bank for their employed which, pays the handsome rate of 4 per cent. Interest on deposits. This good example is now being followed, we are glad to say, by other railway companies; but there is no reason whatever why the system should not be enormously extended. It is easy to say that there is the Post Office Savings Bank. There is, of course, but experience shows that working men often have no great liking for that department. The absolute security which the Post Office gives is forgotten in various minor objections. Working men often think, though quite erroneously, that the proper conditions of secrecy are not observed, and that all the world will know their business if they have dealings with the Post Office. Again, they think that there are difficulties connected with the withdrawal of deposits which rather repel them. Thus it comes to pass that they too often entrust their hard-earned savings to rotten institutions, which end in ruin. If great companies, which employ thousands of hands, would imitate the Southgreat companies, which employ thou-nds of hands, would imitate the South-

EVIDENCE OF MR. CATHCART. On Friday the potitioner, Mr. James Taylor Cathcart, was called, and said he was educated at Marlborough College and Christ Church. He had kept terms in the Temple, but had not been called. He was a deputy, lieutenant of Fifeshire, a county councillor, and held other offices. When he came of age the entail of his father's setate of Pitcairnie was broken, but it was afterwards resettled in his favour. He had known his wife 'afamily all his life, but the first visit he paid to them was in 1894. The first proposition of marriage was made in May, 1887, and he was definitely succepted in June, when he entered into a covenant to secure a jointure of 2500 a year to his wife in the event of his succeeding to his father's property. That was altogether independent of her own settlements, in the arrangement of which he took no part. On the contrary, he told her to do what she liked. She said she would give him a life-interest in the whole of her property, and he thanked her. After the marriage he went on a yachting cruise on the Scotch coast. He had an illiness, but it had nothing to do with a specific complaint.
